

Grey-headed Flying Fox

The Grey-headed flying fox occupies similar habitat to Black flying-foxes (in wet and dry eucalypt forests/trees, mangroves, melaleuca swamps and casuarinas), but over a smaller range that extends south into Victoria.

Populations that once extended north to Rockhampton are now contracting southward of Maryborough in response to diminishing forest resources.

The species was listed as nationally "vulnerable to extinction" under the Environmental Protection and Biodiversity Conservation Act 1999 in December 2001.
